Overview

Rhiannon is a family barrister specialising in financial remedies, regularly representing high net worth clients in marriages and civil partnerships. Her cases often involve issues around complex trust structures, offshore matters, non disclosure, pre and post nuptial agreements. She also specialises in private law children work, believing there is a distinct advantage to the client in being able to offer assistance on both the financial and child law aspects of their case.

Rhiannon prides herself her compassionate and approachable manner with clients, believing this to be particularly important in the emotional context of family law. However she is straight talking and has a reputation as a tenacious and forceful advocate, who works tirelessly for her clients. She is particularly skilled in forensic analysis which is put to equally effective use in financial cases and children cases involving serious allegations. She is known for her tactical brain and tough negotiation skills. She regularly gives lectures and seminars on various aspects of the law on financial remedies and children. She has been quoted in The Times, Financial Times and many other publications. Rhiannon is co-author of The Brief, the monthly financial remedy update in the Lexis Nexis Family Law Journal.

Private Children Law

Rhiannon's practice in private law is focused on the most complex cases involving abuse allegations, alienation, relocation, transfer of residence and specific issues like vaccination and schooling. She never loses sight of how important the subject matter of private law is to the clients, there can be nothing of more profound importance than a child's relationship with their parent.

Rhiannon was invited to speak to Judges and other family law professionals in Japan about parental responsibility and child arrangements on account of a movement for reform of Japanese law, and the law has subsequently changed to more resemble the UK system.

Finance

Rhiannon has a wealth of experience in financial remedies, with her cases usually involving some of the most difficult and complex issues, such as off shore wealth, complex company and trust structures, capacity, non-disclosure and high net worth individuals. She is sought after by solicitors on account of her tactical prowess and negotiation skills as well as her written and oral advocacy, these qualities are deployed highly effectively to secure the best result for the client.
